Page 1 — Management Commentary

CEO: We continue to see healthy demand across stores and digital channels. During the quarter, we added approximately 65 stores, taking the network to about 1,960 locations. We expect the pace of expansion to remain elevated as we enter the next financial year.

For FY27, our current operating plan assumes approximately 180 additional stores. Depending on real estate availability and consumer demand, that number could move higher. We are prioritising locations where we see strong customer traffic and attractive unit economics.

CFO: Revenue for the quarter grew sequentially, supported by store additions and improved digital commerce. We expect FY27 revenue growth to be in the high-single-digit to low-double-digit range, subject to demand conditions.

CFO: Gross margins remained broadly stable, while operating leverage improved as newer stores matured. We expect EBITDA margin to improve gradually as scale benefits come through, although the pace will depend on category mix and promotional intensity.

Our current planning assumption is around 10.8% EBITDA margin for FY27. For FY28, we see a path toward the high-11% range if the current productivity trend continues.

Analyst: Should investors think about the FY27 margin assumption as a firm target or more of a base case?

CFO: It is a base-case planning assumption rather than a formal target. We would revisit it if input costs, promotional intensity, or channel mix changes materially.

Analyst: With the planned store additions, how should we think about capital expenditure next year?

CFO: Capex will remain elevated as we invest in store rollout and digital infrastructure. Our current internal planning range is approximately ■6 billion for FY27, with potential upside if the store pipeline accelerates.

We also expect depreciation to increase gradually as the asset base expands. The earnings impact should therefore be considered alongside the revenue and EBITDA assumptions rather than in isolation.

CEO: Overall, our priorities are disciplined expansion, improving store productivity, and maintaining healthy unit economics. We will update our planning assumptions as the year progresses.
